Organizing for Power, 1890-1920: Women and Clubs

Landmarks Association of St. Louis

FY 1996

Objective

While women's history has finally been widely recognized as a legitimate discipline and subject for serious historians, research in St. Louis has never brought a strong focus on the places of women's activities and organizations. This is somewhat surprising, given the rich and diverse assembly of women's groups that proliferated at the end of the last century and into our own. The objective of "Organizing for Power, 1890-1920" has been to identify and study sites associated with women's associations at and just after the turn of the century. After the Year 1 (FY95) survey brought out basic themes and identified certain sites and organizations for further study, the objective of Year 2 (FY96) has been to continue research on the selected sites and identification of additional sites, producing at least eight completed detailed inventory entries as well as an expanded database of active clubwomen.

Research Design, Methodology, and Products

From the inception, this survey has been guided not only by the theme of women's clubs as an important factor in American social history, but by the name chosen to define the work: "Organizing for Power." Most of the clubs at the turn of the century were social or educational in nature; clubs which organized for the sake of literature or art received less consideration in the survey than those which took on civic, welfare, or political issues. Since this year's survey was based primarily on the findings of the previous year, research began with buildings already identified as potentially significant.

Landmarks employed a two-phase research design on the Year 2 properties. The most important step was to clarify and confirm connections with the women's organizations. Primary sources (contemporary newspaper accounts, annual reports, meeting minutes, and other archival sources) were used to confirm secondary sources (articles, personal interviews, etc.) The second step was to complete the field work and history of the buildings themselves. Field work, including on-site recordation and photography, was followed by archival research using primary and secondary sources (deeds, building permits, library reports, and other documentation) to confirm dates and, where possible, architects.

Most of the properties investigated this year were used as temporary homes or regular meeting places. Straightforward research into known or suspected meeting places often led to unexpected conclusions, dead ends, or additional properties which were then investigated. Some of the avenues which were expected to yield good results proved unfruitful, and several of the original properties were eliminated from the list. In the course in investigating meetings and organizations, more meeting places were noted.

Organizing For Power Year 2 has resulted in the following products:

- Nine completed detailed inventories (exceeding the original estimate of eight)
- A public lecture/discussion by researcher John Saunders at the Cabanne Branch Library in May, 1996
- An expanded, reformatted database of active St. Louis clubwomen.
- A Landmarks Association newsletter article (September/October 1996)

Results

In the search for physical sites associated with women's organizations, the most significant sites are those where the organizations actually met. Those studied in this survey are divided into four types:

•Buildings owned by the women's groups:

FY95

Wednesday Club
St. Louis Woman's Club
Phyllis Wheatley Y.W.C.A

FY96

Central Y.W.C.A. Building

•Rented facilities:

FY95

Syndicate Trust Building

FY96

Two churches rented by the Phyllis Wheatley Branch of the Y.W.C.A.

•Other buildings used as regular meeting places:

FY95

None

FY96

George and Edna Gellhorn House
Barr Branch Library
Cabanne Branch Library
Carondelet Branch Library
Crunden Branch Library

•Sites of extraordinary events:

FY95

None

FY96

Hotel Statler

Few organizations, especially local ones, had the resources to purchase their own buildings. Only one included on this year's survey was owned by an organization: the Central Young Women's Christian Association Building. The local St. Louis chapter was founded nearly 50 years after the first American Y.W.C.A, and with the support of the national group was able to command a large and enthusiastic following within just a few years. Most women's groups through the 1910s were much smaller and met in the homes of their members; other venues included churches, schools, the new Jefferson Memorial building in Forest Park, and in the public libraries.

Public Libraries

The most important resource group within the study was the assemblage of four current or former branches of the St. Louis Public Library. From the completion of the first branch in 1906, the library system offered a significant contribution to the civic life of St. Louis by providing club and assembly rooms to local organizations. An item in the St. Louis Republic (2/5/1917) stated that the 69 meetings scheduled for libraries that week included "study clubs, social organizations, political organizations, Socialists, sewing societies, bankers, children, laboring men, charitable societies, musical clubs. . . . A glance over the various groups leads to the conclusion that in the course of the week about everything under the sun will be discussed in the library buildings, and that a good deal of the talk may be of a kind which would shock the respectable conservative into horror-stricken protest."¹ The libraries' rooms were most frequently used by small or new groups which had no quarters of their own, although larger groups such as the Equal Suffrage League occasionally returned to the library for special meetings even after they had secured a permanent home. A 1917 publication noted that over 100 women's groups made up at least 15% of the meetings at each of the branches.²

Basis for Evaluation/Recommendations for Registration

Recommendations have been made on the basis of criteria set forth by the National Register of Historic Places. Three of the properties evaluated are already listed on the National Register; these will not be considered here.

Most of the properties considered, with the exception of the purpose-built Central Y.W.C.A. and the residential Gellhorn House, were important community centers independent of any connection with women's groups. The Carondelet Branch Library, eligible under Criterion A, can be attributed several significant associations. The Central Y.W.C.A. is also eligible under Criterion A. Both buildings are also individually eligible under Criterion C.

²Margery Quigley, Where Neighbors Meet- An Account of the Use of Assembly and Club Rooms in the Saint Louis Public Library. Saint Louis: Saint Louis Public Library, 1917.

While it does not seem likely that the Gellhorn House is eligible under Criterion A for its association with the St. Louis Equal Suffrage League, it appears to be eligible under Criterion B as the home of well-known activist and national leader Edna Gellhorn. Neither of the parish houses occupied by the Phyllis Wheatley Y.W.C.A. appears to be individually eligible; the site studied last year, already listed on the National Register, clearly has a much more significant association with the branch. The Crunden Branch Public Library is not believed to be eligible based on its associations with women's groups.

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY ON WOMEN'S CLUBS IN ST. LOUIS, 1890-1920

Archival collections and manuscripts

Lillie Devereaux Blake Collection, Missouri Historical Society.

Over 1000 MSS and clippings from the archives of one of America's most prominent suffragists, with material relating to the suffrage movement in Missouri. Material in the collection dates from 1853 to 1910. This collection has been fully accessioned and is accompanied by a guide.

Rosalie Balmer Smith Cale Papers, Missouri Historical Society. Short records on the New Era Literary Club. Mrs. Cale was an accomplished musician and composer.

Kate Chopin Papers, Missouri Historical Society.

Mrs. Chopin was a charter member of the Wednesday Club from 1890 until her death. The collection contains lyrics she wrote for songs performed on the Wednesday Club's annual "Reciprocity Day."

Clubs and Societies Collection, Missouri Historical Society.

Material from various women's clubs, including the St. Louis Woman's Club and the Friday Club.

Equal Suffrage League Collection, Missouri Historical Society.

The Equal Suffrage League was founded in 1910 and became the St. Louis chapter of the League of Women Voters in 1919. The collection consists of financial records, membership lists and correspondence, but does not have a formal history of the League.

Edna Fischel Gellhorn Collection, Washington University Archives, St. Louis.

Contains a small amount of material on women's participation in war drives during World War I and a program for the Equal Suffrage League. Also of interest is an oral history of the League of Women Voters given by Mrs. Gellhorn.

Heald Family Papers, Missouri Historical Society.

Material on the Friday Club, including a membership list.

Ladies Friday Musical Club Records, Missouri Historical Society.

Programs, minutes and a brief history of a predominately Jewish women's musical club, formed in 1892 and still in existence today. The collection has been accessioned and reviewed by Diane Boucher Ayotte.

League of Women Voters Papers, Western Historical Manuscripts Collection, University of Missouri, St. Louis.
The collection contains an early administrative history of the Equal Suffrage League and a series of newspapers published by the National American Women's Suffrage Association from 1916-1920. The collection also contains some business correspondence from the Equal Suffrage League.

Eva Perry Moore Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Eva Moore (Mrs. Philip North Moore) was President of the Wednesday Club from 1892-96 and President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs from 1908-1912. Most of the collection consists of speeches given by Mrs. Moore on women's rights as well as some of her published material.

Joseph O'Neil Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Collections relating to women's suffrage, especially the Barbara Blackman O'Neil scrapbook of the suffrage movement.

Political Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Material on the women's suffrage movement.

Query Club Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Financial records and minutes from a turn-of-the-century women's literary club.

St. Louis Auxiliary of the French Red Cross Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Material on the Goodsonian Literary Club, a women's club that became the local auxiliary for the French Red Cross in World War I.

St. Louis Woman's Club Archives, 4600 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis, Missouri. Donna Charron, archivist.

Jennie Wahlert Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Minutes of the "Humanity Club," a women's organization founded in 1892 to investigate conditions in the city's jail.

Wednesday Club Archives, 12589 Ladue Road, St. Louis, Missouri.

Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense Papers, Missouri Historical Society.
Informal histories and correspondence from an ad hoc auxiliary formed during World War I. Many prominent St. Louis clubwomen served on the committee.

Women's Suffrage Collection, Missouri Historical Society.

YWCA Collection, Western Historical Manuscripts Collection, University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Material on the Phyllis Wheatley Branch of the YWCA, mainly in business correspondence and committee minutes.

INTRODUCTION

This final version of the database of active club women in St. Louis from 1890-1920 expands on the original FY95 product, adding approximately 200 names representing a wide variety of pursuits as well as including a notes field for alternate addresses and offices held. One of the goals of our original proposal was to create a "cultural map" of St. Louis women's history at the turn of the century--to understand how St. Louis women were a part of their community at that time, and how they understood the issues their community faced. By trying to link individual women to their addresses and club affiliations, we have been able to understand better the ways in which clubs were founded, maintained and developed.

Information for this database was drawn from club records in local archives, as well as Gould's City Directories and Blue Books published during relevant years. We would especially like to thank Donna Charron at the St. Louis Woman's Club Archives and Dina Young at the Missouri Historical Society for assistance in navigating archival collections.
