

BATTLE OF ISLAND MOUND STATE HISTORIC SITE

PREAMBLE & MISSION STATEMENT

April 2024

HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE:

The passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854 allowed settlers to determine by referendum whether their territories would enter the Union as a slave or as a free state. This federal legislation replaced the Missouri Compromise of 1820, which declared all land north of the 36°30' N parallel within the Louisiana Purchase would be free of slavery.

Many Missourians feared having additional Free states along its border. Animosity over Kansas' status led to direct violence, even massacres, and near open warfare in western Missouri and eastern Kansas from 1855 until Kansas was declared a free state in January 1861, three months before the first shells exploded over Ft. Sumter.

In 1862, the Missouri-Kansas border was the scene of frequent raids and skirmishes between pro-Confederate rebels and Union forces. In August 1862, U.S. Senator and notorious Kansas Jayhawker Jim Lane began recruiting Black soldiers to join his Kansas forces before other federal efforts.

Many of the Black soldiers were escaped enslaved people who had fled to Kansas from Missouri and Arkansas to find freedom. Some were “stolen” in raids led by Lane or other Jayhawk leaders during the border wars between Kansas and Missouri. Others were freedmen who had moved to Kansas to find a better life. By August 1862, the First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry had grown to about 500 soldiers – enrolled, uniformed, armed and trained into a disciplined unit and ready for action.

In October 1862, 240 soldiers and 12 officers of the Kansas regiment were directed “to proceed to a point on the Osage, Bates County, Missouri, and there break up a gang of Bushwackers.” Using the Fort Scott Road, the troops traveled from their camp at Fort Lincoln, Kansas, and arrived in Bates County on October 27, 1862. Upon arrival, they commandeered the home of local Southern sympathizers Enoch and Christiana Toothman as the troops' headquarters. The troops camped in the yard, used the rails of the fence to build breastworks and rechristened the farmstead “Fort Africa.”

During the next two days, the Black soldiers skirmished with local rebels. On October 29, a detachment of about 30 Black troops engaged the Bushwhackers as a diversion while a foraging party searched for salt and cornmeal. Once the troops returned to the camp, the rebels set fire to the tallgrass prairie, forcing the Kansas troops to set a backfire to prevent flames from reaching Fort Africa. Using the smoke as cover, the rebels fired at the troops then withdrew, hoping the Kansas troops would pursue them.

A party of eight Black soldiers went to locate the rebel position. Venturing farther from camp than ordered, the troops traveled out of sight behind a low hill known as Island Mound. A party of about 20 men sent to locate the first squad joined them and moved farther away from camp. The rebels had successfully lured the Kansas troops into a trap.

About 130 rebel horsemen emerged from the woods bordering the Marias-des-Cygnes River, forcing the Black detachment to retreat toward Island Mound. The rebel horsemen caught them before they could reach shelter in a ravine, and the battle began. On the southern slope of Island Mound, with the prairie on fire all around them, the two groups engaged in hand-to-hand battle. The rebel horsemen carried shotguns, pistols, and sabers and they outnumbered the Black troops 6 to 1. The Black soldiers fought back fiercely, using their bayonets and rifle butts.

When reinforcements arrived from Fort Africa, the rebel horsemen retreated over the top of Island Mound. At the end of the battle, the Kansas regiment had 19 casualties: 8 killed and 11 wounded. Rebel losses were likely similar. The day after the battle, Union reinforcements arrived and descended on Hog Island. They found that the rebels had pulled out, leaving supplies and livestock behind.

News about the battle spread throughout the country. The reports were notable not only because it was the first time Black soldiers engaged in combat during the Civil War, but because of the regiment's success against a larger opponent and the ferocity that they showed that day. Even Southerners praised the Black troops with rebel Bill Turman of Butler being quoted in The New York Times that the Black soldiers "fought like tigers."

The bravery demonstrated during the battle refuted claims that Black soldiers lacked the courage or ability to engage in combat. The Black soldiers' bravery also paved the way for additional African American regiments. By the end of the Civil War, about 180,000 Black men served in the U.S. Army and almost 18,000 served in the Navy.

On January 13, 1863, less than two weeks after the Emancipation Proclamation took effect, the First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry became the fifth African American regiment mustered into Federal service – three months after they won their first battle. Throughout the war, the infantry regiment saw extensive action, fighting in 16 battles and numerous skirmishes. They mustered out of service on Oct. 1, 1865.

This site contains 40 acres and includes the probable site of the Toothman Farm where the First Kansas Colored Volunteers barricaded themselves into what they dubbed "Fort Africa." The site where the battle itself took place is about ½ mile south of the present acreage.

MISSION STATEMENT:

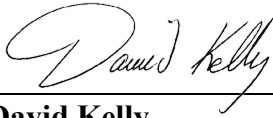

The mission of Battle of Island Mound State Historic Site is to preserve and interpret the American Civil War Battle of Island Mound with emphasis on the Missouri-Kansas "border war" and the effect that this battle had upon African American military inclusion during the Civil War; its battlefield and any archaeological remains of the Toothman Farm; and to provide appropriate and compatible memorial and recreational opportunities.

CONCEPTUAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN

April 2024

Location: Bates County
Established: 2008
Size: 40 Acres

MISSION STATEMENT

The mission of Battle of Island Mound State Historic Site is to preserve and interpret the American Civil War Battle of Island Mound with emphasis on the Missouri-Kansas "border war" and the effect that this battle had upon African American military inclusion during the Civil War; its battlefield and any archaeological remains of the Toothman Farm; and to provide appropriate and compatible memorial and recreational opportunities.

INTRODUCTION

Located in west central Bates County, seven miles southwest of Butler, Battle of Island Mound State Historic Site preserves and interprets the first instance of African-American troops opposing forces aligned with the Confederacy in any theater of the Civil War. The First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry's success and ferocity in battle against a larger opponent, encouraged the formation of other African-American units that would field almost 200,000 black soldiers during the Civil War. The historic site encompasses the probable location of the Toothman Farm, which was commandeered by the First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry on Oct. 27, 1862 and renamed "Fort Africa." The site where the battle itself took place is about ½ mile south of the site's present property. Today, the historic site includes an interpretive shelter, a vault toilet, a shelter, two wayside exhibits and the 0.6 mile Courage Trail.

SITE GOALS

- Preserve and interpret the cultural resources located within the site's boundaries;
- Provide recreational opportunities and public use facilities compatible with the site's mission, resources, and public needs; and
- Provide adequate orientation and interpretive facilities to enhance visitor experience.

INTERPRETIVE THEMES

- The Passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854
- The American Civil War
 - Missouri-Kansas Border Wars: Bushwackers and Union Jayhawkers
- The First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry Regimental History
 - The Battle of Island Mound

- Demonstration to the Nation of African-American troop success
- The Toothman Farm

DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES

Battle of Island Mound State Historic Site’s development should accentuate the preservation and interpretation of the historic site’s significance during the Civil War, providing visitors access to the area of the Toothman Farm, which was commandeered and fortified by the First Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry and renamed “Fort Africa.”

1. Pave Parking Lot & Trail

The existing parking lot is to be paved to decrease maintenance expenses, improve overall safety and enhance the user experience. Likewise, the 0.6 mile Courage Trail may be paved contingent upon targeted historic site investigations.

Special Consideration

Dependent upon investigation of the Fort Scott Road and if located on site, interpretation of the road should be considered.

PLANNING AND RESEARCH GOALS

- Update and/or completion of the site’s General Management Plan
- As opportunities permit, pursuing targeted investigations and documentation of the Toothman House and Fort Scott Road are necessary to provide valuable primary source evidence and new perspectives of the historic site’s resources.
 - Proposed targeted research methods:
 - Archival research to try to identify location of Fort Scott Road
 - Archaeological research, including (1) additional non-invasive geophysical survey to try to determine location of Fort Scott Road (if archival research suggests it is on property), and (2) test excavations at 23BT1131 (Methodist Episcopal Church) as a potential location of Toothman Farm/Fort Africa. (previous excavation of Toothman Farm (23BT1130) did not definitively establish that location as Fort Africa or as the Toothman house)
- Investigate and document the battle site ½ mile south of the Toothman Farm, if permission/access can be obtained, through archaeological and/or metal detector survey.

Note: Due to the magnitude of proposed targeted investigations, contracted archaeological services are merited.

ACQUISITION UNITS

If offered, acquisition of adjacent property may be pursued only through willing sellers or donors. To be considered, units should enhance the mission of Missouri State Parks through one of the following categories:

- Resource preservation and protection
- Recreational access and opportunity
- Management facilitation

PROJECT PHASING

- Phase 1
 - Pave Parking Lot
 - Pave Courage Trail
 - Contingent upon targeted investigations

Cultural and natural resource clearances will be required before on-site modifications and development occur.

CONTEXTUAL PLANNING INFORMATION

Public Input

Public input is an integral part of the CDP process. The following includes input opportunities throughout the planning process:

- 1. Public Survey #1: January 11, 2023 - February 10, 2023
 - a. n = 42
- 2. DSP Team Member Review: February 9, 2024 – March 1, 2024

2	This site is referred to as a "Civil War" site. This is neither accurate nor truthful. There was no Civil War in the USA in the 1860s. By definition, a "civil war" is a conflict between two opposing groups over control of one government. The only old Civil Wars our nation (originally our colonies) have been involved in were the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812, during which times the British and the fledgling USA were both trying to gain control of the United States. You might technically include World War II when the Germans and the Japanese were also trying to take control of the USA. And you could even say that since the assassination of President Kennedy in 1962, we have been involved in another civil war, with the Democratic and Republican political parties both trying to control the U.S. government, sometimes illegally and violently, as the 06 January 2021 Capitol insurrection proves. In the case of the U.S. in the 1860s, the Confederacy did not want to control either the Union or the U.S. government — they wanted complete and sovereign separation from both. For this reason, the proper name for this bloodiest warring period of U.S. history, where families were fighting families, is either the War of Secession or the War Between the States. Both terms have been correctly used, though not as often as Civil War, and War of Secession, or Secession War if you want just a two-word name, would be the most accurate. So, how did we wind up with "Civil War"? No one knows for sure, but it seems that the media of the time thought that "War of Secession" and "War Between the States" was too long to type-set, and "Civil War" was shorter and more print-worthy, so that's what we got. And ever since then, historians, and the media in general, and even Bates County, have perpetuated this error. Interestingly, President Lincoln admitted that the Confederacy was a separate and sovereign nation just one week after the shots were fired on Fort Sumter. On that date — April 19, 1861 — Lincoln signed a one-page authorization to blockade the Confederate seaports on the Atlantic, in the Gulf of Mexico, and along the Mississippi River. According to Nathan Raab, vice president of The Raab Collection of historical documents, "Some of the president's cabinet objected (to) the move, saying it could be seen as a de facto recognition of the Confederate States of America as a sovereign nation because countries do not blockade their own ports. Lincoln, however, was less interested in the legal definitions of 'war' than in victory, and he approved it despite the objections." This blockade order authorized Lincoln's secretary of state to "affix the Seal of the United States to a Proclamation setting on foot a Blockade of the ports of the States of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas." The seal was affixed to the blockade order, causing the Union to declare war on the Confederacy that day, thereby beginning the Secession War.
