	Prince Whipple School	037 Cass	902 E. Elm Street

T: History and Significance

The building that originally stood on this site was a two-room wood frame structure known as the "African" or "Colored" school. This building was destroyed by fire in c. 1910-1920. A modest brick building with minimal fenestration replaced the original frame schoolhouse. Before integration, teachers from Kansas City commuted to teach at this school. In the 1920s, the school was named Prince Whipple School in honor of a slave named Prince who served captain William Whipple during the Revolutionary War. It appears that this building was constructed c. 1896-1911. The drastic alterations have greatly reduced the historic integrity of this property.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces south. The original school house has been drastically altered. Additional non-original features include an off-centered entry with gable roof; diagonal board; casement fenestration with gablets, west elevation; shed-roof additions, south and north elevations.

It appears that this building was used as a grocery in the 1910s. According to Irene Webster, an early occupant and business owner was George Anderson, who ran the grocery and also resided at this location. Visually, it appears that this building was constructed c. 1900-1905. Several modifications have slightly reduced the historic integrity of this building.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces southeast. Additional features include an off-centered entrance with transom; multipaned storefront fenestration; shed roof porch with wooden supports; two/two, double-hung sash fenestration with wooden surrounds; exposed rafter tails; false front at main facade; straddle-ridge chimney; non-original addition, east facade.

T: History and Significance

It appears that the original occupant of this building complex was Gwathmey Manufacturing Company, a foundry and machine shop. This company is identified in a 1918 Sanborn Insurance Map of Harrisonville. Because of several modifications to the original brick structure, the historic integrity of this property has been reduced.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces southwest. Additional features include an off-centered recessed entrance; segmental arched fenestration with wooden louvers and brick sills at the first story; second story fenestration at the primary facade has been covered over. East elevation features a secondary entrance with segmental arch surround; segmental arched fenestration with multipanes and brick sills. Metal vents at ridge line. Original roofline of the main building has been altered; gabled additions have been constructed to the rear or north elevation of this property.

T: History and Significance

The First Christian Church was organized in 1856 by a group of merchants and two physicians---all immigrants from Tennessee, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Virginia. Originally, church services were held in various homes in Harrisonville until 1860 when a frame church was built on this site. In 1882, this first structure was razed and a second church was constructed. The cost of this building, which measured 30 x 60 feet and featured a corner belfry measuring 30 feet in height and tower, was $3500. The first service was held on June 10, 1884. On February 28, 1916, this building was destroyed by fire. Immediately, construction to build a third church began. The corner stone was laid on September 14, 1916 and the dedication was held on April 22, 1917. The cost of the structure was $22,000. An addition to the church was made in 1966. This church is the same design as the Metropolitan Baptist Temple, Kansas City, Kansas, constructed in 1915.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces north. Additional features include two off-centered entrances with wide entablature surrounds, carved stone brackets and prominent transoms; one/one, double-hung, sash fenestration with art glass and stone lugsills; prominent centered projecting pediments supported by engaged monumental Ionic fluted columns and brick piers flanking a series of paired windows divided by spandrels; continuous molded stone water table and belt coursing ; rusticated brickwork at the basement level; stone coping at roof line. An addition to the west and south facades was constructed in 1966.

T: History and Significance

An early occupant of this home was J. C. Bridges. Other former occupants were the Ovserholser family and then the Triplett family. It appears that this house was constructed in two phases, c. 1889-1894 and from visual inspection, c. 1920-1925. The alterations, which are in themselves historic, have not reduced the property's overall historic integrity.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces west. Additional features include a centered entrance; full-width porch with brick piers and railing has been screened in; one/one and nine/one double-hung sash fenestration with wide stone lintels and sills (first story) and wood surrounds (second story); semi-hexagonal bay, south elevation; non-continuous stone water table; prominent shed dormer, west elevation; close rake. The brick first story is the extant visible portion of the c. 1889-1894 construction. The second story and porch alterations were added c. 1920-1925.

T: History and Significance

The first occupant of this building was, more than likely, the M. E. Church. A footprint of this home with the name "M. E. Church" does appear in the 1902 Sanborn Insurance Map of Harrisonville. Visually, it appears that this building was constructed c. 1890-1899. It remains in excellent condition and has retained much of its historic integrity.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces south. Additional features include a canted entrance; half-width, wrap-around porch with wooden columns on paneled plinths, pedimented entrance; carved brackets and wooden railing; one/one, double-hung sash fenestration with wooden surrounds (often paired); decorative shingle in gable end. It appear that the original one-story structure was later modified to its present form.

T: History and Significance

An early occupant of this home was Lee Hurtzler who owned a general store. Visually, it appears that this home was constructed c. 1902-1905. While it does appear on the 1909 Sanborn Map, it is not illustrated in the 1902 edition. Despite the addition of siding, it retains a high degree of its historic integrity.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces south. Additional features include an off-centered entrance; half-width, semi-hipped roof wrap-around porch with Classically-inspired columns; one/one, double-hung sash fenestration with wooden surrounds; multiple pediment dormers; semi-hexagonal bay at main and east facades.

T: History and Significance

It appears that the tile barn and silo were constructed c. 1920s. The earliest known owner of the property was the Grogger family, who used the property as a dairy barn from c. 1940-1972. The tile barn and silo have retained much of their historic integrity and are both somewhat of a rare property type due to the use of exterior tile. Tile building blocks were occasionally employed, but generally they were too costly for widespread adoption. Also, according to Noble, "the blocks were somewhat brittle and an accidental sudden impact would often cause the blocks to crack." The hay barn, which is also tile clad, has retained much of its historic integrity. The dairy barn, constructed c. 1940, is in poor condition.

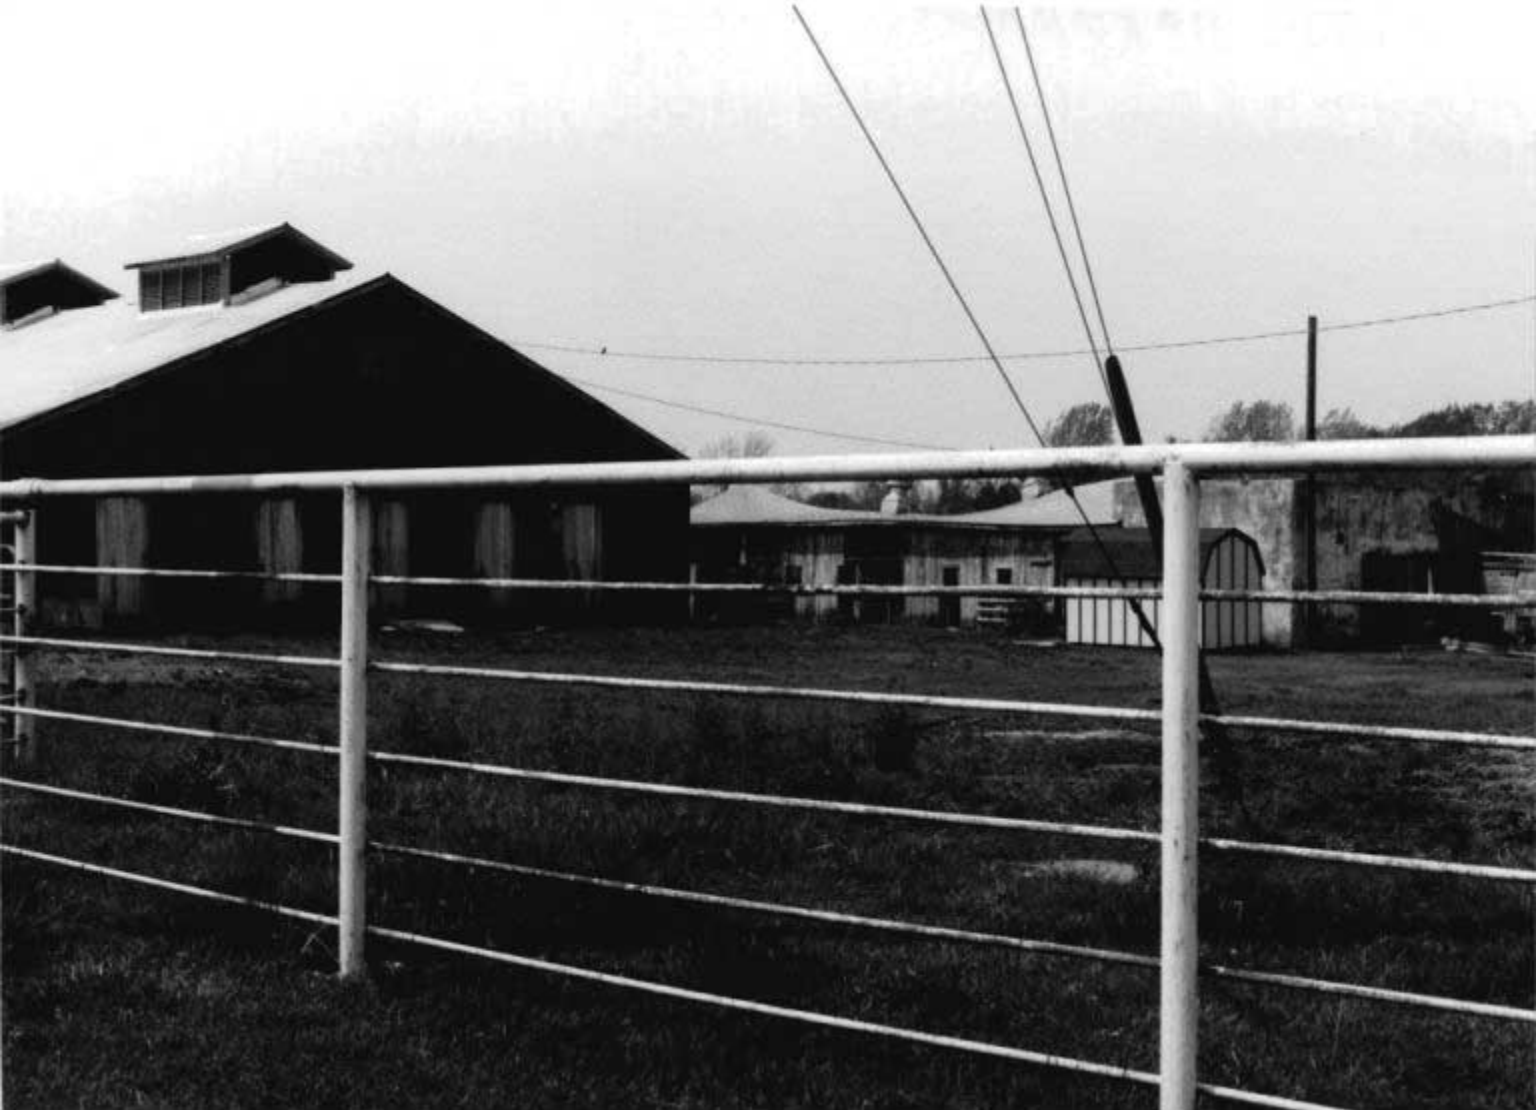

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces north. Additional features include a series of eight wooden cattle (cow) doors with metal hinges flanked by a series of eight three/three double-hung sash windows. Gabled ends feature drive-in doors with smaller entrances. Roof ridge features three prominent gabled dormers with vents. To the east of the tile barn is a hay barn with clipped gable roof and gabled dormer. At the north west corner of the main barn is a circular tile block silo with hemisphere used to store corn. To the south of the main barn is the clapboard dairy barn which is in poor condition.

T: History and Significance

In 1929, this church was constructed as the Harrisonville United Methodist Church, under the leadership of Rev. G. E.Hargis. The building was dedicated on the first Sunday in May 1930. On June 1956, the cornerstone was laid for a new Education Unit which expanded the church facilities to include an office, nursery, parlor and thirteen classrooms. In the late 1960s land was purchased for a future building site. Groundbreaking for the new building occurred on May 5, 1985 and the new sanctuary, office space and classrooms were completed in 1986. The present building became the Grace Baptist church after 1986.

2X: Further Description

The main facade faces south. Additional features include: 1/1 art glass, double-hung sash windows with stone lug sills; main facade three-bays wide; central bay houses double door entrance with art glass transom; entry is recessed and placed in segmental arch with brick surround; projecting central gable bay with cut stone parapet; large art glass window in pointed arch with stone drip mold; end bays contain sash-type windows and stepped cut stone parapet.

T: History and Significance

Visually, it appears that this residence was constructed c. 1890. A former occupant was the Ewing family. Alterations to the front bay and probably the main entrance area have reduced the historic integrity of this property.

2X: Further Description

The main facade faces north. Additional features include: fenestration of two vertical lights over two vertical lights, double-hung, sash windows with surround and lintel; rectangular bay with semi-hip roof in gable end; octagonal window gable end; entrance located in a gable roof projection.

T: History and Significance

D. C. Barnett had this house built for his family. DeWitt Clinton Barnett, a prominent attorney of Cass Co. moved to Harrisonville in 1883. He married in 1889 and probably had this residence built shortly there after. This residence retains a high degree of integrity and would probably be individually eligible for National Register listing.

2X: Further Description

The main facade faces north. Additional features include: 1/1 double-hung, sash-type windows with wood surrounds; hip roof dormer with paired windows; semi-hexagonal bay-second story; wrap-around porch with open balustrade; Doric columns support shed roof; two-story semi-hexagonal bay; center ridge interior chimney; non-original wooden door.

T: History and Significance

Visually, it appears that this Queen Anne cottage was constructed c. 1895. The Porter family were occupants of this residence. In 1894 the Bennett family purchased the house and at that same time began an extensive restoration program. At that time, the wrap-around porch was removed and restored to its original size. Boards from the original porch were used to build the present railing.

2X: Further Description

The main entrance faces south. Additional features include: sash-type windows with surround and entablature; gable dormer with decorative vergeboard; wrap-around porch with turned post and spindles; center ridge chimney; canted wall bay with hood; prominent gable with return and vergeboard.

T: History and Significance

This residence was originally an I-House. However, the many alterations and additions to the house as obscured the original design and therefore no longer retains its integrity. It appears that the original portion of the residence was constructed c. 1870-1875. A former occupant of this residence was the Crouch family. There is possibly a log cabin incorporated in this residence, however no documentation has been found to substantiate this.

2X: Further Description

Over the years this residence has had multiple additions. It appears that the original design for this house was that of an I-house. This original portion houses the main entrance. Additional features include: fenestration of 1/1 light, sash-type windows with wood surrounds, entablatures and shutters; projecting two-story end bay- west- has semi-hexagonal bay on first story and casement ribbon windows on the second story; exterior end chimney; large fix window with transom located on the second story over the main entrance; pediment supported by engaged columns over entrance; multi-light transom and sidelight; large rear addition with flat roof.

T: History and Significance

This residence was constructed in 1916 for Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Hight. At the time of its construction, it was considered to be the "handsomest in Cass county". The building was designed and planned by Earl B. Ferrel and Gus Handley of the contracting firm of Ferrel & Handley, Belton, Mo. The foundation for the residence was completed by Jacob H. Davis, Harrisonville. Others who worked on the building were: L. Payne, Belton and J. M. Hunt, Clem Jones, Evarts. S. Jones and F. E. Webster, Harrisonville. The stone and concrete work was done by Jacob H. Davis. The interior featured dark fumed oak, mahogany doors and fireplace with Rockwood tile front. When completed the house cost $15,000 to construct. The roof of the east porch was designed for a conservatory, with parapets of built-in flower boxes.

In 1960, the property including the house was purchased by St. Peter's Episcopal church. The building was named :The Robert Nelson Spencer Hall:, named for the beloved Bishop Spencer who always did so much for the growth and the good of St. Peter's church.

2X: Further Description

The main facade faces south. Additional features include: 8/1 light, double-hung, sash windows with surrounds; hip dormer with tripartite sash window; terra cotta tile ridge coping; central bay porch with hip roof supported by stone piers; main entrance-multi-light door with multi-light sidelight; two-story stone pilasters visually separates the main facade into bays; one-story, flat roof side porch with closed balustrade(east); porch entrance placed in a segmental arch opening; entrance is multi-light with sidelights.

T: History and Significance

William Scruggs, an earlier Harrisonville businessman purchased the lot this residence is situated in 1891 from Walter Brown. Shortly after the residence was constructed for him. In 1904 Scruggs sold the house to Hattie Brown. There were nine owners following Brown. In 1987, Don Bockelman acquired the property and undertook a large restoration project, completing his project in 1991. During this project, the design for the house was changed to Queen Anne. Originally the design was that of a Gabled-Ell.

T: History and Significance

The original owner, Andrew Deacon, was a business magnate who constructed several commercial and residential properties in Harrisonville. His most notable commercial building is the Deacon Building, built c. 1892. This home was the second home for Deacon and his family. Built in 1890, this Queen Anne style residence replaced "Locust House" which was destroyed by fire in 1889. Another early resident was W. S. Byram, attorney. The home remains in good condition and retains much of its original integrity. Although there has been some alterations and siding has been added, the home still retains a high degree of its historic integrity

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces south. Additional features include off-centered entrance; wrap-around porch with pedimented roof supported by wooden columns on a solid stone railing; one/one double-hung sash fenestration; second-story porch, south elevation, with shed roof and non-original wooden supports; projecting bay, east elevation; secondary entrance with shed roof, east facade; pedimented dormer, main elevation; non-original addition, rear elevation.

T: History and Significance

Former occupants of the home were Robert and Louise Numbers. At one time, this address was the location of a beauty shop and at a later date, it was modified into apartments. Visually, it appears that this home was constructed c. 1895-1900. A footprint of this home appears to be illustrated in the 1895 Atlas of Harrisonville, but its accuracy is not certain. Because of several alterations, the overall historic integrity has been jeopardized.

2X: Further Description

The main elevation faces north. Additional features include an off-centered entrance; two/two vertical light and six/six, double-hung sash fenestration with wooden shutters and entablature surrounds; recessed side porch, west facade; addition to east elevation; carport.
