42. FURTHER DESCRIPTION OF IMPORTANT FEATURES
 Surrounded by a playground/park, the Garrison Community Center has a east/west orientation. The building consists of a three-part composition (a central core flanked by long rectangular wings). Three centrally located entrances lead to the central portion of the building. A brick chimney projects from the north wing. Fenestration also includes small square windows with stone and brick surrounds. The brown and buff colored brick with white stone trim illustrates the tapestry brick design of the upper level. The building is further adorned by the brackets beneath the overhanging eaves of the roof.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

This mult-functional building was called, in 1915, "the only settlement center in Kansas City exclusively for Negroes" (#3). The officials and employees of the center were also black. The building contained a gymnasium/assembly room, showers, a reading room, and a branch library. In preparation for designing this building, the architect visited Chicago in 1911 to inspect their public bath houses. Lubschez's design of this building was approved by the Park Board in 1911, but construction of the $50,000 structure did not commence until 1913.

The school had several other unique features. It operated the first open-air school on the roof of the building. This outdoor classroom was established to build up the strength of underdeveloped children. The only school medical clinic at the time was also located here. Much of the curriculum stressed vocational training and the "Gary System" was used. This system was similar to that used in high schools, where the student moves from room-to-room and teacher-to-teacher, throughout the day.

Charles A. Smith was the chief architect of the Karnes School. Smith was also responsible for the designs of numerous other schools in Kansas City.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE The Holy Rosary Church has had a strong influence on the Italian Community and throughout the northeast since its construction in 1903. Although the building itself has been through three fires, it remains one of the centers of neighborhood activity. On Easter morning in 1903, the original frame church (which was constructed in ca. 1895) was destroyed by fire leaving only the rock basement (#2). The present building was built the same year but another fire in 1948 destroyed the interior. Again, in 1955, a fire destroyed the alter. (#1)				4. PRESENT LOCAL NAME(S) OR DESIGNATION(S)
