42. Further Description of Important Features: Two-story frame, 3 bay, Queen Anne/Colonial Revival residence built ca. 1905. The house has a foundation of hollow core concrete block, hipped roof of asphalt shingles, interior brick chimneys, and exterior of weatherboard siding. On the main (S) and east facades is a one-story shed porch with original fluted Ionic columns and a railing with turned balusters. On the main facade is a primary and secondary entrance. The primary entrance has an original six paneled door with a single light rectangular transom. In the west bay of the facade is the secondary entrance which has a ca. 1920 glass and wood door. Windows are original 1/1 rectangular wood sash with frame cornices and sills. On the second story of the main facade is a projecting bay which originally contained an open balcony. This balcony has been enclosed ca. 1940 with wood siding and 2/2 horizontal sash windows. The original fluted Ionic columns remain. In the gable field of this projecting gable are hexagonal wood shingles and an oval wood panel with a sunburst design and wood keystones and shoulders. At the roofline of the main block is a gable dormer at the roofline with hexagonal wood shingles and an elliptical attic vent window.

43. History and Significance: This residence was built ca. 1905 and despite the enclosure of the second story porch it retains much of its original design and character.

44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings: This residence occupies a rectangular urban lot in a residential section of Poplar Bluff.

Address: 917 Hickory Street

42. Further Description of Important Features: Two-story frame, three bay, rectangular plan I-House built in 1884. The house has a concrete foundation, gable roof of asphalt shingles, and exterior shiplap siding. On the main (E), south and west facades is an elliptical one-story porch which has original milled columns, brackets, a railing with square balusters, and a spindled frieze. The main facade has two primary entrances which contain original single light glass and wood doors. Windows are 1/1 rectangular wood sash. In the gable fields are vergeboard, milled panels, and drop pendants.

43. History and Significance: This residence appears to have been a rural estate of the late 19th century. The house is sited on a large lot and faces towards N. Main Street which is a half block east. The house possesses one of the largest original porches in Poplar Bluff.

44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings: This house occupies a rectangular urban lot in a residential section of Poplar Bluff. To the east of the house is a one-story carport and ca. 1930 frame and stucco shed.

42. Further Description of Important Features: One-story brick, 10 bay, industrial building constructed ca. 1910-1917. This rectangular plan building has a concrete foundation, hipped and flat roof of clay tile shingles and rolled roofing, and exterior of stretcher bond brick. The building has four primary entrances on the main (w) facade, two of which retain original glass and wood doors. The other two entrances have ca. 1970 sliding overhead doors. The north five bay section is taller than the south wing. The north section has original 56 light metal casement windows above and below each other in each bay. These windows have concrete sills. Windows in the south section are arched multi-light casement design with each arch containing three courses of brick relief arching and concrete shoulders and keystones. Each bay of the building is separated by brick pilasters. At the roofline of the south section is an octagonal vent window. The building continues to be used by the city.

43. History and Significance: This building was constructed ca. 1910-1917 to serve as a power plant and waterworks for the city. The building retains much of its original design and continues to be used by the city.

44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings: The waterworks building is located adjacent to the Black River in an industrial area to the north of the commercial section. To the north of the waterworks building is a one-story brick, four bay, ca. 1915 garage with ca. 1950 hinged doors, casement metal windows, and a hipped roof.

42. Further Description of Important Features: Two-story, frame, two-bay irregular plan residence built ca. 1890. The house has a concrete foundation and a full basement. The many roof styles include a gambrel roof, a shed roof addition over a hip-roofed porch, a two-tier shed-roofed porch and a square tower with a pyramidal roof. The original form of the house is hidden by its many additions, although the additions look to be historic. On the main facade, there is a two-bay milled porch with turned columns, balustrade and frieze. In the frieze are decorative fan-hike corner brackets. There is a shed roof addition above the porch. A modern porch of somewhat temporary construction has been added to the west side of the house. The porch is supported by square columns and has a plywood balustrade. The corner tower is two stories tall and has a two-over-two sash window with decorative surrounds on both exterior walls. The pyramidal roof is supported by ornate scroll brackets. There are decorative shingles and a carved decorative band below the brackets. There is a hipped dormer on the east side with another two-over-two window with a decorative surround. There is also a corner bay adjoining the tower in the basement and on the first floor with Italianate brackets and windows.

43. History and Significance: This house represents a variety of Victorian styles including Italianate, Queen Anne and Eastlake. J.J. Greer lived in the house in the early twentieth century. Although he lived in town, he farmed outside the city limits.
