Sanborn maps show this house is frame although its form is more typical of a brick house. Siding has altered the original openings which consist of two windows on each level - the door is located on the north side. An 1885 permit for the addition of a story to a frame dwelling may apply to this house.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION:

21. (cont.) History and significance. Expand box as necessary, or add continuation pages.

This two-story brick building originally had a store at the first floor level, with a second floor apartment. It has a flat roof with terra cotta coping and a brick corbelled cornice, although part of the cornice is missing. Are three window openings at the second floor, although one has been filled in with brick. Part of the iron storefront is still in tact, although the window openings have been filled in with siding.

This two-story flat has a hipped roof that crosses a front facing gable. This creates an L shaped plan, with a hipped roof porch at the corner of the L, where the front entrance is located. This porch has square brick posts and columns, although it looks to have been enclosed at a later date. Above the porch is a single window with a stone sill. The gable-end bay facing the street has a cornice with wooden brackets, and a grouping of triple windows at each floor, each group sharing a stone sill.

This two-story brick house has a flat roof with a side stepped parapet with terra cotta coping. The front facade has corner square pinnacles with what appears to be galvanized caps. There is also a galvanized cornice. The two front entrance doors each have transoms and are located on the left side of the front facade. To the right is a large square window with stone sill. On the second floor are three single windows, each with stone sills. All windows have non-functioning shutters. The entire building is constructed with an unusual brick bond, with frequent headers that create a variegated pattern.

No building permit could be found. A street numbering certificate is dated 5/1/1913 by owner Gustav Mayer, although it seems that certificate is for 207-09 Bowen, and this building appears to be a bit older.

41. (cont.) Further description of important architectural features. Expand box as necessary, or add continuation pages.

There is a contributing garage built in 1947. It is mostly frame, although the east wall is brick. It has a gable roof and holds two cars.

This one-story brick house has a flat roof with a shaped parapet with terra cotta coping. The parapet includes square corners and a central pediment that is stepped and has a decorative "X" in white glazed brick. There is also a cornice with dentils, which appears to be galvanized metal. The front facade is symmetrical with a central brick porch with square brick supports. This shelters a front door with transom. Flanking either side of the porch are large square windows, with stone sills and brick segmental arched lintels.

This one-story brick house has a flat roof with a shaped parapet with terra cotta coping. The parapet includes square corners and a central pediment that is stepped and has a decorative "V" in white glazed brick. There is also a cornice with dentils, which appears to be galvanized metal. The front facade is symmetrical with a central replacement porch with a concrete foundation and wrought iron supports. Flanking either side of the porch are large square windows, with stone sills and brick segmental arched lintels. The windows are replacements, and are eight-over-eight.

The cornice is corbelled brick. The second story has two broad segmental arch window bays with three windows. Decorative wood fills the gaps between the window and the arch. A band of molded brick extends across the base of each window. The lower story has been remodeled - brick and new windows fill the original display windows but the cast iron pilasters are still visible. This building shares an asphalt shingle awning with 6901-03 next door.

This one-story frame house has a front facing gable roof. It has a gable roof addition at the rear. It is difficult to date, because permits could not be found, although it does appear to be on the Hopkins map of 1883. The bay closest to the street has one two-over-two window with non-functioning shutters. The entire house is covered in vinyl siding.

This two-story brick corner commercial/residential building has a flat roof with a an elaborate cornice of stepped bricks. The main facade is on Ellwood, with the corner of the building at Ellwood and S. Broadway having a polygonal angle. Along S. Broadway there is a stepped parapet, one bay of commercial windows, with other windows being single with a stone sill and brick segmental arched lintels. The front facade has central bay with the entrance recessed behind a curved arch. A wide stone stringcourse divides the first and second floors. At the second flloor the various windows (all new) share a continuous stone sill. In the cornice of the central bay are the words "Blumenthal Building". At the first floor, to each side of the arched entrance, are storefront windows.

This one-story brick house has a side-gabled roof with terra cotta coping. Its front facade was originally symmetrical, and appears to have been a duplex. On the center of the front facade are openings for two doors. The left door has been bricked in, the right door has had the transom filled in. Window openings for single windows flank each of the door openings. The replacement windows are too small for the original openings. The building has been painted.

This one story brick Queen Anne cottage has a complicated roofline, with a gable-on-hip roof that shelters a small veranda at the first bay, and a front facing gable end second bay. The second bay includes a paired window with a wooden mullion. Some of the original decorative vergeboard remains. The entire brick house has been covered in a simulated masonry.

The 1888 permit does not have an exact address, but the date and cost seems accurate. This house was built after the 1883 Hopkins map. In the 1917 City Directory a Burgess was living at this address, helping to establish A. Burgess as the original owner, and verifying the permit.

This two-story brick building originally had a storefront on the first floor, and an apartment on the second. It has a flat roof with red terra cotta coping, and a stepped parapet on the east and west sides. There is a brick corbelled cornice with three levels of corbelling. The second floor has three single windows with brick segmental arched openings.

A permit for a brick 2-story dwelling and store on the west side of Broadway for $1000 by owner W. B. Silvey is dated 12/4/1896, and is likely referring to this building. The building at 110 Fillmore was moved here in 1931. A permit was taken out on 11/24/1931 for $1000 by owner Leonore Cohen to "move brick dwelling and store" at 110 Fillmore, but it does not say where it was moved from. There is a permit dated 8/29/1966 for $500 by owner Dow Manlove to "replace 3 wood windows with aluminum". It is possible that the storefront was bricked in around the same time.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION:

21. (cont.) History and significance. Expand box as necessary, or add continuation pages.

This one-story frame house has a front facing gable roof. The original house is one bay wide, with a single window on the front facade. A shed roof frame addition has been added to the west side. It has a rectangular window facing Fillmore Street. The entrance is on the west side. An exterior brick chimney is located on the east side of the house. The east side of the house appears to be covered in asbestos siding, although most of the house is still wooden siding.

This one-story brick home has a flat roof with a shaped parapet, with white glazed terra cotta coping. At the entrance bay, the parapet steps up, with two square pinnacles leading to a pediment. There is also a brick corbelled cornice, and decorative terra cotta in diamond patterns. The entrance bay is on the left side of the facade, and include the front door, and a small one-over-one window with a limestone sill. They are sheltered by a hipped roof front porch, with wrought iron supports. To the right of the entrance is a single window, with a limestone sill, and a brick and terra cotta label mold.

This building's parapet is its most distinguishing feature. A pediment is centered in the parapet and is flanked by dentils of contrasting colored brick. A white glazed brick diamond pattern is centered in the pediment. Each story has two bays. The second story bays and the entrance are in segmental arched openings and the lower story window is round arched. Contrasting colored brick accents each bay. The second story windows are smaller replacements. A full-length porch is metal on wrought iron supports.

This one-story brick house has a flat roof with terra cotta coping. The original shaped-parapet and wooden cornice have been removed. The white glazed brick dentil is remarkably still intact, as is the original front porch. The porch has a front facing gable roof with extended rafters, supported by white glazed brick columns with Corinthian capitals. The front entrance has been filled with vinyl siding. The front facade has two single one-over-one windows, with a continuous sill, which divides the front facade into two sections with contrasting bricks.

There is a building permit from 3/20/1889 for a two-story brick house on this block, for owner Wm. Stith. A street numbering certificate was taken out for this address in 1890. The house appears to pre-date both of those dates, and it is on the Hopkins map of 1883. Built as a single-family home, a permit was taken out on 6/10/1942 to alter the dwelling for use as a tenement. It was for $2500, with W. C. Choisel (Chosen?) listed as the owner, and J. P. Stevens as the architect.

This 1.5 story brick house is unusual for Carondelet. It has a complicated roofline, with a main side gable, with three intersecting cross gables, the largest of which is a hip-on-gable. This hip-on-gable bay forms the right side, or main bay. It has a central exterior chimney, with picturesque brick quoining. Flanking the chimney on the first floor, are two single four-over-four windows, with stone lung sill, and a flat arched stone opening, with keystones. At the half story level the chimney is flanked by smaller rectangular windows, with stone sills. To the left is the central entrance bay, with a front-facing gable roof, and decorative clinker bricks. The entrance door is curved arched with stone quoining. To the left, at the first bay of the house, is an unusual brick dormer with a sloped gable roof. There are two three-over-one windows with stone lug sills. There is a bay windows on the north side facade. The entire house, including the bay, has a slate roof.

This two-story brick residence has a flat roof with a shaped parapet with white terra cotta coping. It has a curved pediment with steps. According to the permit, the cornice, with brackets and a wide dentil, is actually galvanized iron. The front entrance is on the left side of the front facade. To the right of the entrance are two single windows, which share a continuous sill. On the second floor are three symmetrically located windows. All single one-over-one, with stone sills. The large front porch was probably added in 1928. It has a low-pitched front facing gable roof, with stone tapered supports.

This one-story brick house has a flat roof with a shaped parapet with four square pinnacles. There is a cornice with simple brackets, and brick corbelling beneath. The front facade has two openings. On the right is the front entrance, which is an arched opening with the original door which sits behind the arch. The arched brick is outlined with bullnosed brick. To the right of the entrance is a single one-over-one window, which is outlined with bullnosed brick. It has a continuous stone sill, which extends the length of the front facade. This sill divides the facade into two sections of different colored brick.

This two-story brick two-family flat has a flat roof with a shaped parapet. The original galvanized cornice has been removed. The front facade is two bays wide. The left side entrance bay includes two doors with transoms. They are accessed by gable roofed front porch, with wooden supports. On the first floor, the right side bay is a paired window, outlined by a brick label mold. It has a continuous limestone sill. On the second floor, the first bay is a single one-over-one window, with a stone sill. The second bay are two windows, each with limestone sills. Like the first floor windows, both second floor window bays are outlined by a brick label mold.

21. (cont.) History and significance. Expand box as necessary, or add continuation pages.

This two-story brick two-family flat has a flat roof. Its original shaped parapet looks to have been removed, creating a short mansard roof, with exposed exposed "rafters" at the cornice. The alteration makes the house more traditionally Craftsman in style. On the left side of the front facade is a two-story porch, with brick supports with Corinthian capitals. To the right is a paired window. The original paired window was removed, replaced with too small windows surrounded by added brick. On the second floor there are two one-over-one replacement windows, which share a limestone sill. A door opens onto the second story of the porch.

The original church building, built 1863, is a two-story brick building with a front facing gable. It has massive corbelling and narrow round-arch windows, that are two-stories in height. The rest of the church was added in 1896 by an unknown architect. It extends from the south facade of the 1863 church, with a central square tower with buttresses and triangular pediments at the roof. The main body of the church has a cross gable plan, with round arch stained glass windows. A flat roof addition was added at the southeast corner of the 1896 structure, in 1968.

This one-story brick four-family flat has a flat roof with a white glazed terra cotta cornice and brick corbelling. The front facade is symmetrical with four openings. The center bays include two recessed entrances, each with two replacement doors. Flanking the entrance bays on either side are large one-over-one windows with stone sills, and non-functioning shutters. At the second floor are two single one-over-one windows with stone sills, at the first and last bays. At the center is a decorative brick square below two small square windows with stone sills. The front facade has been obviously retuckpointed, or possibly rebuilt, up to the bottom of the second floor windows.

The north side of the building appears to be the original. This section has a remodeled lower story but a portion of the original wrought iron store front remains exposed on Michigan Avenue. This earlier section of the building includes a brick cornice and segmental arched windows in the second story. A series of alterations are recorded in permits primarily in 1904, 1909, and 1914 and include a two story addition on the south side and a one-story addition on the west.

A projecting center bay under a hipped roof is this building's most prominent feature. This section includes a bracketed wood cornice with a gable peak in the center and a rounded bow on the lower story with round arched windows and a balcony above. The main entrance is recessed behind a round arched opening; keystones and voussoirs decorate the openings on the facade. A recessed side bay is five-sided under a gable roof and has a balcony in the second story.

This building has a simply shaped parapet with a bracketed wood cornice. Two entrance bays under a gabled overhang with bracket supports are positioned in the center. Two bays of segmental arched windows flank the center section. The six window bays in the second story are also segmental arched. There may be an older house incorporated in this - there was a numbering certificate issued in 1879 for 7017-19 to Augusta Deutman & Louisa Ibers.

A pyramid-shaped roof that intersects the main hipped roof is this house's most distinguishing characteristic. A gable over the slightly projecting entrance bay on the right also intersects the main roof. A recessed door stands behind the round arched entrance bay. A pair of windows is located in the center of both levels - the lower story pair sits in a segmental arched opening. The corner under the pyramidal roof is positioned at an angle and has a window at each level (balcony in second story).

This was built as a single dwelling but served at one time as a funeral home. The high pitched hipped roof has hipped dormers with single windows. The first story has a round arched entrance bay that leads to a recessed corner porch. The other lower story facade bay is a round arched window. A rounded, wood bay window is located in the second story corner. Sanborn maps (1938) show that the rear addition was a chapel.

This house sits high on a corner lot and stands out with its two story tower and conical roof. A projecting wing holding the entrance bay has a gable roof that intersects the main hipped roof. Contrasting colored bricks accent the segmental arched windows on the facade and the rectangular openings on the tower. The round arched entrance bay sits on cluster column supports. The side elevation, facing Robert Street, has segmental arched windows and a decorative ogee-type arch outlined in contrasting color brick trim.

The mansard-type parapet is asphalt shingle with a bracketed cornice at its base. The facade openings (three in each level) are segmental arched with wood decoration between the window and the arch. The entrance bay likely had a recessed door but it has been enclosed - this may be a historic alteration.

Pedimented windows are positioned in the shingle-clad second story. A wood cornice divides the two levels. The two-bay facade has two segmental arched window bays - the door is located on the side in a short projecting wing. A brick stringcourse with flower medallions and dark brick voussoirs decorate the facade.

This house existed by 1900 according to census records but the facade appears to be a 1930s to 40s alteration. The bracketed wood cornice from the earlier facade remains intact. A center entrance bay accesses four recessed doors. Paired, shuttered windows are positioned in both levels. The brick on the facade is contrasting-colored; the sides are uniform-colored red brick.
